Second Sunday After Epiphany

GOSPEL John 2:1-11 At that time there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee: and the Mother of Jesus was there. And Jesus also was invited, and His disciples, to the marriage. And the wine having run short, the Mother of Jesus said to Him: "They have no wine". And Jesus said to Her: "Woman, what would you have me do? My hour is not yet come". His Mother said to the attendants: "Do whatever He tells you". Now six stone water jars were placed there, according to the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three measures. Jesus said to them: "Fill the jars with water". And they filled them to the brim. And Jesus said to them: "Draw out now and carry to the chief steward of the feast". And they carried it.

Now when the chief steward had tasted the water made wine, and knew not whence it was, but the attendants knew who had drawn the water: the chief steward called the bridegroom and said to him: "Every man at first sets forth the good wine: and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but you have kept the good wine until now".

The Gospel of this Sunday's Mass is that of the Wedding Feast of Cana.

This calls to mind the Sacrament of Matrimony that most people in the [Traditional] Catholic Church have received, and in which they will find either their eventual salvation or damnation.

In modern day America around 50 percent of all marriages end in divorce, so we are talking here about statistics in epidemic proportions. Every priest knows of any number of troubled marriages in his parish, but often feels helpless when attempting to assist so many couples who face such problems.

After some research and much prayer, I have attempted to distill 8 points experts generally agree upon that might just save your marriage not only from eventual divorce, but could possibly deal with problems, and help create real happiness in rather desperate situations.

ONE. Listen to one another. Communicate!! ~ Whenever a marriage breaks down it is often the case that both husband and wife have issues that need to be dealt with. It may be painful, but sometimes listening to the other person can help both parties understand what is wrong with the relationship, and therefore they can begin to know how to repair the damage.

TWO. Express your feelings. ~ I know that men don't generally like to do this - it seems more like a "woman thing." But experts say that you must be able to express your feelings so your spouse can understand your point of view. It is important to accept feelings and thoughts respectfully, and not to denigrate the others point of view.

THREE. Be willing to compromise. ~ As with any relationship, compromise plays a large role in the ultimate success or failure of a marriage. I believe for a marriage to be truly successful, both husband and wife must give 100%; it's not that each gives 50%, both must give 100%. Generally, my experience is that when I say this to married couples they nod their heads in agreement. Out of this attitude there can come a real sense of compromise.

FOUR. Stop the "Blame Game." ~ I remember a song sung by Pearl Bailey from the 1950's entitled: "It Takes Two to Tango." It is very rare for one person to be solely responsible for the problems which can arise. Blaming each other for everything is not fair, nor is it realistic. The root of humility is truth. Recognizing the truth about yourself in a marriage can go a long way in repairing the damage, even if it might be a very painful thing to do.

FIVE. Spend some time apart if necessary. ~ Some time ago, I became friends with married converts from the Reformed [Calvinist] church. They had their own mail-order book business, which gave them a comfortable living. "Ruth," as I will call her had a good job at the local University library, which she actually quit to help her husband full time. I told my friend whom I will call "Glen," that I thought it was a bad idea to do this, for even people who get on well together can become enemies if they partner in a business and are with each other day in and day out. Sure enough, a year or so later, the marriage was in trouble and they were talking about divorce. Experts say that "taking a break" in a relationship, rather than attempting to contrive closeness is just what a marriage may need.

SIX. Learn to forgive and forget. ~ Everyone makes mistakes but learning to forgive those wrongs will go a long way in learning how to save a marriage. Nobody likes to be reminded of past sins or slights, whether real or imagined, and your spouse is no different. In the real world, both people in a marriage should ask for forgiveness, but even if this does not happen, it is important to let go of past mistakes for the future and health of the relationship. In addition, Christ Himself commands us to forgive, and contemporary experts actually agree with Him here!

SEVEN. Find some common goals. ~ Before marriage, even among Traditionalists, it is important to come to a meeting of minds: Will the wife work outside the home --- how many children will there be --- etc. Be sure to know what each other thinks about these matters. In marriage, it is important to SCHEDULE for example, a "date night" once a month or so, because time, like a thief passes by swiftly and without mercy.

EIGHT. Practice random acts of kindness. ~ All of us have had the experience of an unexpected kindness. Someone, out of the blue brings a gift; the mistake you made is very easily forgiven by a superior, or perhaps not really noticed at all. I'm sure there are many other such examples. Remember to do this in marriage, because it can be a real attitude changer. I always gave my mother roses on her birthday, and that sealed the love between us forever. Fr. G. Safreed

St. Agnes of Rome was born in 291 AD and raised in a Christian family. Agnes was very beautiful and belonged to a wealthy family. Her hand in marriage was highly sought after, and she had many high-ranking men chasing after her. However, Agnes made a promise to God never to stain her purity. Her love for the Lord was great and she hated sin even more than death!

Whenever a man wished to marry Agnes, she would always say, "Jesus Christ is my only Spouse."

According to legend, the young men she turned away became so angry and insulted by her devotion to God and purity that they began to submit her name to authorities as a Christian follower.

At last, she was condemned to death. Even the pagans cried to see such a young and beautiful girl going to death. She did not pay attention to those who begged her to save herself. "I would offend my Spouse," she said, "if I were to try to please you. He chose me first and He shall have me!" Then she prayed and bowed her head for the death-stroke of the sword.

She died a virgin-martyr at the age of 12 or 13 on 21 January 304.

Agnes was buried beside the Via Nomentana in Rome. Her bones are currently conserved beneath the high altar in the church of Sant'Angese fuori le mura in Rome, which was built over the catacomb that held her tomb. Her skull is preserved in the church of Sant'Agnese in Agone in Rome's Piazza Navona.

St. Agnes is widely known as the patron saint of young girls. She is also the patron saint of chastity, rape survivors and the Children of Mary.

Agnes is depicted in art with a lamb, from the Latin word for "lamb", agnus, the symbol of her virgin innocence. The name "Agnes" is actually derived from the feminine Greek adjective hagnē meaning "chaste, pure, sacred". She is also shown with a martyr's palm as a young girl in robes holding a palm branch with the lamb either at her feet or in her arms.

Her feast day is celebrated on January 21st. She is one of seven women who, along with the Blessed Virgin, are commemorated by name in the Canon of the Mass. On her feast day, it is customary for two lambs to be brought in to be blessed by the pope. On Holy Thursday the lambs' wool is removed and woven into the pallium the pope gives to a newly consecrated archbishop.
