FATHER SAFREED'S REFLECTIONS

Last week we began our discussion of the discipline of Philosophy by pointing out that it all began with the ability of men and women to possess a sense of wonder. Because of this, we end up asking the great questions of life when inundated with the beauty that surrounds us. Questions also come to mind when faced with pain, misfortune and loss—in other words the Problem of Evil. This is part of what philosophy does: it attempts to grapple with life and the questions that come upon us. In this, philosophy attempts to make sense out of life as we experience it, and how we might best regulate our lives. So, what are some of those questions? Let's start with these:

- [1] What is happiness? [2] What is the purpose or meaning of life?
[3] What is justice? [4] What is love? [5] How can we know?

To we who are Catholic, these questions may seem silly or even ridiculous. But in point of fact, they really are important. First of all, we must make a distinction between what might be called "natural" knowledge, and that which is "revealed," or supernatural knowledge. Revelations are things that we would not otherwise know, unless God had revealed them.

Take for example the existence of God himself. It has been the conviction of most philosophers in history—starting at least with Aristotle—that the human person can come to the conviction that there is a God, utilizing human reason alone. By the fact that there is something, there must be a being that is responsible for that something. This only makes sense. On the other hand the fact that God is Triune, that he is three persons in one God, is something that had to be revealed, otherwise we would never have known it on this earth.

Philosophy stays on the level of the natural. It's common for people to want to stray into faith and theology when talking with others or attempting to convert a person to the faith. But when talking philosophy, we stay within the bounds of its own method—that is the tool of reason, that will hopefully bring us to wisdom. We don't deal directly with Revelation.

So, let's take the question: What is happiness? If you were to ask students in a classroom, one would get all kinds of responses, depending upon their ages, whether they were male or female, the culture they come from, etc. Their responses would almost always be what they consider happiness is on the natural level.

But the question is tricky. I may think that winning a million dollars in the lottery would make me happy. But if 5 years from now I've spent all of it, even gotten into debt, maybe even become drug addicted, happiness now alludes me by my own doing. This can be a discussion that a person can have with most anyone on a natural and philosophical level. This is part of what makes us above the animals— we can reflect on these abstract ideas, and often come to a consensus about them. So, philosophy can help us make choices out of Wisdom, rather than self-destruction — even before we bring up the things of God.

*If you are new to the chapel, Welcome.
New parishioners please consult Father Safreed before the reception of sacraments.*

Remember, also, Lord, Your servants and handmaids below who are gone hence before us, marked with the sign of faith, and sleep the sleep of peace. To them, Lord and to all that rest in Christ, grant, we implore You a place of happiness, light and peace through the same Christ our Lord. Amen.
